For the first year of vacancy, a property must acquire both a vacant building registration and re-occupancy inspection. For each additional year a property is vacant, it must be re-registered. An additional re-occupancy inspection fee is not required. However, a property must be reinspected prior to occupancy to ensure the compliance orders are corrected and the property complies with city ordinances. Sellers must inform buyers of correction orders and requirements. Buyers can assume responsibility for corrections, and must contact the City.
